

More funding for carers services

2019 Budget

The Australian Government is investing an additional $84.3 million to support the 2.7 million Australians caring for loved ones due to disability, age, mental illness, or long-term physical illness.

What was announced in the 2019 Budget?

The Australian Government will invest an additional $84.3 million to boost services for Australia's carers including more financial support packages, respite and increased support for young carers.

Under the new measure, carers will be able to access over 5,000 financial packages valued at up to $3,000 for practical supports to help them in their caring journey. The new measure will also increase the availability of respite to support carers' wellbeing.

Up to 25 per cent of all financial packages will be reserved to support young carers' continued participation in education or in the workplace.

Young carers will be supported by dedicated young carer support workers employed across Australia to provide outreach services with schools, youth services, training organisations and employers.

Getting help early can make a big difference to a carer's life. It can help reduce emotional or physical strain, stay in work or study, and ultimately improve their health and wellbeing.

That is why the Government is investing in early intervention and prevention support to ensure carers get the support they need before they reach crisis point, and to help sustain them in their caring role.

This new funding forms part of the Australian Government's overall investment of $550 million over the next four years to roll out improved services and supports for carers, as part of the new Integrated Carer Support Service model.

What new services will be available to carers?

We are currently designing and testing new phone counselling, online peer support and coaching services for carers, and developing a full suite of practical educational resources to improve carer wellbeing, skills and knowledge.

Carers will be able to access these new supports and services from July 2019 through the Carer Gateway website at www.carergateway.gov.au

From September 2019, carers will be able to access support and services through a new network of Carer Gateway service providers. Local services will include:

- carer needs assessment and planning
- targeted financial support packages with a focus on employment, education, respite and transport
- in-person and phone-based coaching, counselling and peer support
- information and advice
- access to emergency and short term respite
- assistance with navigating relevant, local services available to carers.

Why focus on young carers?

When a parent becomes very ill or has a disability or mental illness, all too often it's a child who takes on the responsibility of caring for them. In Australia, more than 270,000 carers are under 25.

These caring responsibilities can often place a heavy strain on their education and training, or efforts to find work. This is why up to 25 per cent of all targeted financial support packages will be reserved for young carers to assist them continue their participation in education and training.

Young carers in receipt of Carer Payment or Carer Allowance will be prioritised for the targeted financial packages to support their engagement in education or employment.

Will existing services for carers be affected?

Carers can continue to access support through their usual service providers until the commencement of the Carer Gateway service providers from September 2019.

How can carers access supports and services?

Carers can call Carer Gateway on 1800 422 737 (Monday – Friday, 8am – 6pm) or visit www.carergateway.gov.au to find out what current services are available to support them.

From July 2019, new online services will be available through the Carer Gateway website.

From September 2019, carers can call Carer Gateway on 1800 422 737 to speak directly with their local Carer Gateway service provider. The Carer Gateway service provider will assist carers to access relevant services and support in their local area.
