Indigenous Homelessness in Australia

On the best available data, 105,000 Australians are homeless every night. Of these, 16,375 are sleeping rough.

Indigenous people are more likely to experience homelessness than other Australians. The 2006 census identified that 2.5% of the population were Indigenous but that 9% of the homeless population were Indigenous. Indigenous people were over-represented in all sections of the homeless population. For example of the people who were living with other households 3.8% (1,780) were Indigenous; of the people that were living in boarding houses 5.8% (1,252) were Indigenous; of people that were living in improvised dwellings 15.8% (2,587) were Indigenous, and of people who were living in specialist homelessness services 20% (3,910) were Indigenous.

What we are doing to make homelessness everyone’s responsibility?

In December 2008, the Australian Government released a White Paper on Homelessness, The Road Home, which called on all levels of government, business, the not for profit sector and the community to join together to reduce homelessness. The Road Home outlined the need for new investment in homelessness and reform of existing services. Homelessness must be prevented wherever possible. People who experience homelessness must be supported to move quickly through the crisis system into long term housing and at the same time get help to reconnect with education, employment and the community. Mainstream services and homelessness services have to work together more effectively to reduce homelessness.

Work already under way

In The Road Home the Australian Government committed to boost its efforts across all areas of government to achieve the 2020 headline goals and interim targets for reducing homelessness. The improvement in housing conditions for urban, regional and remote Indigenous communities will provide the foundation for improvements in health, education and employment and contribute towards closing the gap on Indigenous disadvantage.

Specific Australian Government initiatives include:

- $1.2 billion per year over five years (2008-13) for the National Affordable Housing Agreement to ensure that all Australians have access to affordable, safe and sustainable housing that contributes to social and economic participation;
- $5.6 billion for the Nation Building Economic Stimulus Plan to construct new dwellings and refurbish existing social housing dwellings. It is expected that 7% of dwellings will be specifically targeted to Indigenous Australians;
- $400 million over two years (2008-2010) for the National Partnership Agreement on Social Housing to increase the supply of social housing. Based on current public housing allocations, up to 15% of tenants accommodated may be Indigenous;
- $5.5 billion over 10 years (2008-18) for the National Partnership Agreement on Remote Indigenous Housing to provide up to 9,000 new houses and upgrades to existing houses in remote Indigenous communities;
- $1 billion nationally over the next four years to build 50,000 affordable rental properties under the National Rental Affordability Scheme;

New work through the National Partnership Agreement (NPA) on Homelessness

In November 2008, the Council of Australian Governments established a National Partnership Agreement on Homelessness. Under the Agreement the Australian Government has agreed to provide additional funding to the States and Territories to reduce homelessness. States and Territories have agreed to match the Australian Government funding to deliver services and capital projects that will reduce homelessness.

Under the National Partnership Agreement the Australian and State and Territory Governments are contributing a total of $1.1 billion over four years to reduce homelessness. Approximately $238 million of this funding will be spent on Indigenous specific programs.
